Details: Let's be honest, nowadays musicians come a dime a dozen, especially when it comes to the internet. There are thousands of artists that all look, act and sound alike. Quite frankly, there is no way to avoid the fact that most of them have no talent, and are simply just trying to imitate those who really do. Bau Down FAM are among those select few extremely talented musicians, who continue to set musical trends. They struck gold in 2007 with their creative hit single, "Take Me Out" which featured the beloved Chicago Cubs announcer Harry Caray. It was the first of several songs that really took off and gave them an overwhelming amount of exposure on the radio and internet avenues like Myspace. In just over 2 years working together, Bau Down FAM have truly already made their mark as two of today's elite musicians. With over 600,000 website hits, close to 1 million collective myspace plays, and over 900,000 collective myspace page views total, they have been fortunate to be discovered by thousands of loyal fans via the internet. All numbers aside, it is clear that they are doing something right. In the past year, there have been countless record label executives and talent scouts continually in pursuit of business relations with the duo. However, no deals have taken place just yet and they seem to be doing just fine without any help. They stand firm with the mentality that until anyone can offer to do something for them in which they can't do for themselves, they will reap all the benefits of being independent musicians with the world at their fingertips.
