The violin they gave her served a short sentence under her fingers as she was ejected from the class for "sword fighting" with the bow. Jill's musical life took a bit of a turn from there, immersing herself in her older siblings classic rock albums. Her brother Chris, also a musician, pounded endless rhythms into her young evolving brain with his Ludwig drum kit. Jill picked up a guitar in college and the rest is herstory. Originally from Ohio, Jill made the trek to Colorado in 1993, where she still resides. In 2000 Jill formed the "Damn Straps", a kicking girl band that played the Ft. Collins area and had the pleasure to open for former Kingston Trio member, John Stewart. The band dissolved in 2005 and Jill began to work on a solo career after attending the Colorado Contemporary Music College in 2004. Jill's had the opportunity to play with some amazing musicians including opening for acts such as Liz Barnez, Arthur Lee Land and Zoe Lewis. Two years and many lessons later Jill is ready to hit the scene with her brand new CD release "Consequence of Truth" available in November 2007.
