Details: Adapter began his musical visions at the young age of 12, learning guitar and bass. At the age of 16, several bands were comprised dealing with 3-piece alternative rock music, though he felt a lack of substance and creativity within that genre of music. After high school, his room mate introduced him to computers, which he became quickly aquainted with. That same year he met fellow programmer musician Jung Bo Seul, a Korean refugee who showed him phrenetic breakcore beats in a whole new light, and the first Adapter song was born. "Research And Development" is the versatile follow up to Adapter's previous album "Restoring Chaos", both are released under the Dangerous Machinery record label. He continues where he left off in his first album and then creates a whole new level of boundry breaking genres. You can contact the website to find out album and show information.
