Details: Paul Sabo is a singer/songwriter, who gets his roots from R&B, Southern Rock, Folk, Metal, Country and Funk. Trying not to follow one particular genre of music, he truly follows instinct and being caught up in the moment when writing a song. Combining his diverse influences to come up with a classic rock sound all his own; his songs are familiar, yet original at the same time - mainly due to witty lyrics and catchy riffs. Band History: I grew up with many musical influences throughout my life, starting with my father; a musician himself, whom I've listened to for years. He played mostly covers of just about everything from The Stones, Hendrix and Van Morrison to John Conolly and Cat Stevens. Later on got into hard rock/metal. Love Sabbath and Priest. Played out mostly in South Carolina. Played country, Pop, R&B and Metal. Guitar in one band, mostly drums in others. I always love jamming with other people, but since I moved to San Francisco 5 years ago, and just got into the work thing. I became sort of a loner when it came to music. I wanted to do what I wanted to without anyone else ego or time schedule to deal with. I decided to just do it myself. If things work out I would love to get a band together. Influences: I enjoy a little bit of everything. I get a little something out of just about any genre of music. I enjoy rock music in general. I love a crunching guitar, kickin drums, as well as a catchy tune I can sing along to. I enjoy classic rock, like Beatles, Stones, a little Motown, Metal, just a tad bit of country, even a little Sinatra...
