If George Orwell's novel 1984 had a soundtrack that was recorded in the "Terrible Now" of the new millennium Vincent Quatroche's newest CD of Spoken Word/Sonic Landscapes entitled In Dreamthink would retell the story of Winston and Julia. 19 MP3 Songs SPOKEN WORD: Poetry, SPOKEN WORD: With Music Details: In Dreamthink is an audio artifact of the sonic subconscious of the dreams and nightmares that prowl the nocturnal landscape of the urban citizens of Gridville. Intended to be a random sample or sub-section of the individuals emotional terrain In Dreamthink slices away the daylight hours of daily routine and negotiation with an increasing complex and perplexing system. It is in those small hours of the night that we see each other as we really are; drifters in the temporary confinement of the flesh, awaiting the release from corporeal reality to a more certain implied fate that in sleep we get to taste a small dollop of infinity. In Dreamthink you will hear the stories that only the night can release. While these vignettes offer little direction or answers to either the destination or final resolution to our brief existence in Gridville, In Dreamthink offers perhaps the only true gift, after love, one human being can hope to give to another; Escape.
