A menagerie of musical styles ranging from progressive rock to acid jazz filled with distinctive sounds and creative composition tied together by innovative percussive, orchestral and acoustic sounds. 9 MP3 Songs ROCK: Progressive Rock, ELECTRONIC: Ambient Details: Planetary Citizen's debut album, Artifacts From the Space Age, is a menagerie of musical styles ranging from progressive rock to acid jazz. The album contains a blend of acoustic and electronic sounds recorded over a five year period by James Dooley in his home studio. Songs like Home and Polar Caps combine a background of unique layered drums with a melodic tapestry of guitar bass and synth, complimented in a variety of ways using creative effect processing. Morning Moon and From Four Hundred Miles Up explore odd timed polyrhythms with driving drum beats and eerily plaintive melodies. Each song on this album is a unique blend of masterful musicianship - filled with distinctive sounds and creative composition tied together by innovative percussive, orchestral and acoustic sounds.
