She remembers always dancing around the house and never feeling shy to show off in front of family members. As a child, her parents always took her along to local festivals and parades, further exposing her to music and entertainment. This would become the spark that lit the fire and passion with which Darlene would begin to pursue a career in music and entertainment in later life. Her first entry into entertainment and in beginning to explore and develop her creative talents was at age 10, when she took dance lessons in the art of Plena dancing, a traditional Puerto Rican folkloric dance. She quickly mastered this dance. At age 14, she participated in her first beauty pageant and spontaneously decided to sing in public for the first time for the talent portion of the pageant.
