From The OC WEEKLY - 12/11 THIS WEEK IN HOMEY WARMTH by Dave Wielenga If Kerry Getz had been in Bethlehem for the Very First Christmas, there's absolutely no doubt she would have cut short her encore at the Following Yonder Starbucks, grabbed her guitar and donkeyed on down to the Club Manger to carol the last couple of choruses with the rest of the angels. In fact, knowing Kerry, we suspect she would have hung around even later to perform a free solo show - sort of like the Little Drummer Boy, except of course she's not a boy and, thank God, would have the sense not to bang a freakin' drum next to a newborn. What we never knew until now is what would have been on the set list. But Getz has released a Christmas album, It's a Wonderful Life, on the World In Motion label. The 11 songs on the disc canvas the undulating moods of the season, beginning with the traditional "Lullay Lully," before bending immediately into one of Getz's own compositions, "Suspended in December." It goes on like that, from Old England ("The Wexford Carol") to vintage Charlie Brown (Vince Guaraldi's "Christmas Time Is Here"), and from homey warmth ("It's a Wonderful Life") to, well, songs with names such as "In the Bleak Mid-Winter" and "In the Rain." Every selection is arranged and delivered with Getz's achingly grateful style - even Martin Newell's snickeringly cynical "Christmas In Suburbia." All we can say is: "Jesus!"
