Music that could have been written by the unclaimed love child of Ani DiFranco and Elliot Smith, conceived on the bed of Seattle indie pop. A roller coaster, from acoustic picking to string snapping, electronica sound spasms and beat boxing. 10 MP3 Songs FOLK: like Ani, ROCK: Modern Rock Details: Adam Freedman gets around. Hes lived in mud huts in Cameroon, caught reptiles, eaten things best not eaten...as a biologist, hes spent a good bit of time in various small towns and backwaters...catching and tracking bears in the swamps of western Florida, surveying caribou on the North Slope of Alaska. Hes survived head-on collisions with 10-ton trucks and tropical fever, gotten drunk on palm wine with village chiefs, had guns waved in his face, and played Lynyrd Skynyrd covers in dive bars in exchange for beer and crawfish. He was born in Detroit and grew up on a lake on Cape Cod listening to heavy metal, fishing, and avoiding all things involving golf and plaid. Moving to Seattle in 2001, through a combination of unemployment, sleep deprivation, and coffee, he started writing music. He moved to Los Angeles in 2002 where he is finishing up a Ph.D. in evolutionary biology, and will begin a solo acoustic tour in the summer of 2007. Live Magazine described Adam's music as "so fresh it's almost indescribable...an eclectic Paul Simon quality with a hard-edged kick...absolutely wails on the acoustic."
