The group Reality Falls was started in late 1999 with Progressive-Rock keyboardist Keith Robinson and adding the Alternative-Funk style of bass player Jerry Opdycke. The two of them began to write a few original pop/funk tunes over the next several months. Bringing in the Jazz-Fusion sounds of guitarist Dave Denlinger, the three writers now working together soon started to form what they believed to be a new and refreshing style of music. A good turning point came when adding the great versatile style of Rock-Jazz drummer Ian Frydrych. The group now began to develop its own true personality. Several months later the group brought on board the Pop vocal talents of Matt Woolley. This helped add dimension and direction to the group, from the dreamy vocal sounds on smooth funk tunes to the hard edge of reality on some of the Pop-Rock songs. At this point the group continued to further develop this new style of music. Finally with the added great Jazz chops of saxophonist Carl Coan the group was well on its way through a new musical journey creating what today is known as Pop-Fusion. It is music that can rock your world with sophisticated precision and a smooth funk groove. And as music is the true universal language of the world, we are speaking out to those who truly wish to listen. We are saying, "We dare to be different".
