Captivated by the guitar sounds of Eric Clapton and Jimi Hendrix, he taught himself as he played along with their records. (Records did exist that recently.) From the start he liked to create his own riffs, his own words. Well, you know how life goes: One day you're a family man, then the next thing you know you're on your own, divorced, wondering where you're going to stay. Bill's life was going down hill fast! A perfect time to write more songs and spend even longer hours playing guitar. Adding a bit of humor, he wrote about those times, creating songs people relate to and respond to. Sean Chambers, talented singer and guitar player who has played all across the U.S. and Europe, recorded Bill's song, "Crazy Loving You". Audiences responded well to Bill's song, spurring his confidence. Bill finally found a good woman., Lina. With her encouragement and his friends' enthusiasm, Bill recorded 12 of his songs on the CD, "If I Lose Your Love". He has realized his first dream: People like his music, both lyrics and guitar. His CD has been purchased by people from 20 to 60. So if you've had good love, bad love, tough times, and hard work, you will surely enjoy the CD, "If I Lose Your Love": You will relate to it.
