You might be tempted to say, "Gwen Stefani meets Tracy Chapman". But only then would you begin to get a glimpse of what Leah-Carla Gordone is all about. Here is a young woman with an extremely unique vox and a riveting stage presence, but defining Gordone is beyond words. Play the music for starters. There is no comparison. Once in a very great while, someone comes along who sets the standard for a whole new category of music. She calls it, "Breaking new ground with a new sound for a new era". Born and raised in the heart of New York City, Leah-Carla is the daughter of the late Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Charles Gordone. She began singing, acting, and dancing professionally as a child and went on to attend Fiorello H. Laguardia High School of Performing and the Arts as a drama major. As a Theater Arts major at SUNY New Paltz, she starred in the musical "Cabaret". She was selected to perform at Boston's NEMO Music Showcase and Conference and toured with "Indiegrl" through seven states. She has performed three times at Columbus, Ohio's well-known annual COMFEST, a three-day festival of arts, crafts and music with five stages. She opened for Norah Jones and The Indigo Girls at Promowest Pavilion in Columbus, and recently was one of three performers selected to perform at the Global Entertainment and Media Summit (GEMS) in New York City. Leah-Carla Gordone has just released her second full-length CD "Dancing On The Dragon". If the "dragon" represents the obstacles one must overcome in order to achieve a higher ground, Gordone seeks to make peace with the "dragon", and make her music dreams a reality. Her debut CD "Butterfly Child" captured her vibrantly unique and soulful voice, and let us glimpse her struggles and vision through lyrics that took you on an intensely personal journey. "Dancing On The Dragon" celebrates life and its challenging lessons. From NYC, the Village (a regular at CBGB's, Bitter End, Mercury Lounge) to Woodstock (Joyous Lake, Tinker Street Cafe), from Boston to Key West, Los Angeles to London, Nashville, Chicago, New Orleans, and Columbus, OH, as a one-woman show or with her band, Leah-Carla Gordone sings and accompanies herself with a mean 12-stringed acoustic guitar that is black and bedazzled with butterflies and stars. Gordone's single, "The Road", is currently being played on Hot A/C and Top 40 radio stations across the country.
