With time his skills grew and he soon developed a liking for the piano. After he learned the basics from his music school he soon began teaching himself how to pick parts and harmonies from songs that he heard. Shortly after that he began writing his own songs as a middle schooler. They weren't very good, but showed lots of potential. In highschool he joined the chorus and began to develop a love for performance and R&B in particular. So, he decided then that he knew he wanted to be a singer for life and he wants to share his experiences with the world through his music. Quentessentials are expressions of his young life; written, produced and performed by Quentin.
