Their considerable time together has allowed the band to develop an entertaining live show and a tight musical chemistry. The Dingleberries released their debut self-titled album in 2005, and according to Bartley Kives of the Winnipeg Free Press, Songwriter Frank MacLean delivers big-league pop-folk ditties a strong and unexpected debut. The band has shared the stage with classic rockers Chilliwack and The Northern Pikes, hot new country artists Doc Walker, and blues great J.P. LePage, to name but a few. The band is at home in various venues, from clubs, to performance theatres, to festival stages, and the band members love bringing their music to new audiences.
