Sultry folk with a blue note. How is it that something so different can feel so familiar? A collection of songs written and performed by the siren next door. 11 MP3 Songs FOLK: Alternative Folk, BLUES: Folk-Blues

Show all album songs: Seventh Siren Songs Details: Virginia has lived most of her life in the South: South Carolina, South Australia, and Southern California. She grew up in Charleston, singing harmony with her guitar-playing brothers. In later years, she performed in talent shows, coffee shops, and at church when asked. (Musicians are always asking some girl to sing so they can play in the background.) While involved in community theater, Virginia began studying with Nashville voice coach Susan Anders. During this period, Virginia recorded a jazz demo and got her first gig at Castrillo's. But she found herself humming her own tunes on the side. So, long story short, she took a collection of her original songs to the studio and recorded Seventh Siren. As a performer, Virginia has appeared on stage and television as an actor and announcer in the United States and Australia. As a writer, her fiction and nonfiction have been published in literary and community publications, her plays have been performed as public readings, live theater performances and on television, and her poetry was recently featured on a UK podcast. The Nashville Film Festival used her original one act scenes in successive years in their Film Workshop for Children. Virginia has performed as a jazz vocalist with ensembles at commercial venues and at nonprofit benefits. Currently, you can catch Virginia playing her original music solo with her Taylor acoustic/electric.
