Her father was the lead singer for the Southern Bells, of New Orleans, Louisiana, the Corinthian Singers of San Francisco, California, and he sang with the Soul Stirrs of Chicago, Illinois. Her mother holds a Liberal Arts Degree form Xavier University, Louisiana, majoring in Music Education and she has played piano for various churches in Louisiana, and the Bay Area. It was a normal family setting to see Yvonne, her brother, and her sister at rehearsals or live performances of either parent. I have always sung either imitating my father and his quartet group or I was singing along with the various choirs my mother would be playing for, says Yvonne. My first public solo performance was at the Rock of Ages Baptist Church in New Orleans, Louisiana. My grand mother had often reminded me that when I was 2 years old I sung Walk with Me Lord with confidence and an up-lifted voice. At age 5, I had my first experience directing a choir; my mom was playing the piano and directing the senior choir of the New Strangers Home Missionary Baptist Church, in San Francisco. The choir was not following as she was directing with one hand and playing with the other. So, I began directing the choir as my mother played the piano. Shortly there after I became apart of the childrens choir and began directing them After about 3 years my father was called to be the Pastor of First Corinthians Missionary Baptist Church, in Oakland where my family formed the music department. My mother played piano and organ, my brother played drums, my sister sang in the youth choir, and I directed the youth choir. I have been giving praise and worship in this way all my life. Gods Always There is the first of many gospel CD productions planned to come form Yvonne C. Cobbs-Bey a multi-talented alto songstress.
