At the young age of 15, Laura Corlin has independently produced and performed on her first full length CD called The Difference Music Makes. A series of music CDs created to benefit young hospital patients living with life-threatening diseases. "Laura has a really good ear for music," said Scott Richardson, Laura's voice teacher for the past two years, "and knows when it's not working and can self-correct. She's highly refined in that sense. Laura is unbelievably focused for her age," he said. "Focused and organized. An awesome kid." Laura's desire is as strong as her talent. "I've been performing since the age of 6," she said, "and I haven't stopped. One of my greatest passions is sharing my talents with people ... It's this rush of excitement and a bit of nervousness, but complete happiness when I'm on the stage." "Laura is someone who truly loves music, all kinds of music and that is rare for someone her age," Richardson said. In the last few months, he and Laura have tried out many different children's songs for the CD. Richardson arranges and Laura sings. When they find something that works, they record it, either during her weekly, one-hour lessons or after a few days of tweaking and tinkering. "I literally teach in my studio," Richardson said. "There I have access to synthesizers and high-tech equipment. Last month we did a medley of three songs: 'Do Re Mi,' the ABC song and 'One Little, Two Little, Three Little Indians,'" Richardson said. "We wove classical, jazz and country in and out of the songs, exposing kids to different kinds of music." "The Difference Music Makes" is a community service project created to benefit the young patients during treatments from cancer and other life-threatening diseases.
