An aggressive blend of rock, pop, blues and country that places voice and lyrics upfront and personal. 12 MP3 Songs POP: 70's Pop, ROCK: Acoustic Details: George Douglas Lee began a musical career in 1972 that took him throughout Texas and the Southwest U.S. as front man for electric rock band Uncle Jak. As a solo artist, three of Lee's singles received regional airplay, including "Sweet Brutal", "The Price Is Paid" and "Maybe I'm Fallin'". His second single, "Elaine", was in the top five on several Texas stations. In 1982 he formed the group Geo to record an album, "Made To Be Played", which was featured on Houston station K-101. Moving to Galveston Island, Lee began to perform as a solo act. He put down the '68 Telecaster, and armed with a Takamine EG-334BC, he played at Island clubs, continuing to compose new songs. He walked into the newly opened Courtyard Cafe, a quaint European bistro in historic downtown Galveston to play at an open mic night. The Cafe was frequented by folkies, invoking the atmosphere of a mid-sixties coffee house. Lee quickly changed that with his high energy originals. This led to a series of weekly performances and a growing following. A packed Saturday gig inspired him to record the live performances, resulting in the production of this CD. In addition to his exploits as a performing songwriter, Lee is a playwright, screenwriter and fine artist.
