Her first public performance of an original tune, "Ballet Dancers", was at age at a grade-school assembly, and she's been involved in performances (both on stage and backstage) ever since. While her 20 years of formal classical training included violin, viola, piano and reeds, her creative desires spurred her to also explore jazz, world music, folk, pop/musicals and rock music. Being the daughter of a professional string player/teacher in the Chicago area afforded her numerous opportunities for study and master classes with many prominent professional players. This also led to a substantial "education" in various aspects of the business of music as well. In 1980 she met international recording artist James Kennedy who is a guitarist and composer. In 1986, after recording with Enja Records of Germany, Catherine and James founded Heart Consort Music-BMI, a company dedicated to "Promoting the wealth of talent in the Midwest" through recordings and performances.
