5-track maxi-single. A smooth relaxing start builds to upbeat, danceable techno and synth soundscapes. 5 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Techno, ELECTRONIC: Dance Details: Immediately upon completing their December 2004 debut release, AWFUL GOODNESS, musician-producer Mark Baranowski began work on he and his wife (Ryli Morgan)'s first single off the album, "Anything". Consisting of 5 tracks, the disc features a smoothed-out version of the title song, as well as a near-15-minute-long, pounding club version. Mixed in between is a 130 bpm remix of Ryli's first contribution to the afore-mentioned album, "Life", and an eerie, synth-heavy redux of their sole vocal collaboration thusfar, "No Explanation". Bringing it all home is "Bleh", a previously unreleased track which would be a perfect accompaniment to a modern horror movie. With a total running time of over 48 minutes, the single proved to be nearly as long as the album itself, but with a greater emphasis on appealing to the club (both dance and strip) scene.
