Edgy guitars, haunting pianos, and melodic hooks mesh to form musical energy. Their unique sound is pooled with an unprecedented stage presence that creates an amazing platform. The band's founder, lead vocalist, and key songwriter, Brent Reed, is a native of the Greater-Cincinnati area. Brandon Gray (guitars), Joe Sandfoss (bass guitar), and Tony Talbott (drums/percussion) fashion the entourage of talented young men known for their ability to create and entertain. Brent recorded and released his first solo project entitled "Windows to the Soul" in 2000. Since then he's honed his craft while touring through the country, recording several singles, and gathering a loyal following. In the summer of 2003 Brent partnered with his current band members. After tedious months of writing and recording, the Brent Reed Band recently released their latest album "Falling a Mess". This project beautifully highlights Brent's lyrical skills and melody lines and Gray's unique guitar themes. Currently the band is involved in working on their third music video project along with their second VCD. "All in all, I'm blessed," says Brent. "Music is such an amazing tool for influencing individuals, and as I've been able to share my art and bring a message to people, I've been able to garner so much back. The opportunity to do what we love and to actually see other people enjoying our sound and responding to the ideas is rewarding beyond words." Companies Brent has worked with...
