As a teenager, Jeremy became heavily involved with recording CD production for talented new musicians with limited resources. In college, Jeremy focused on helping up-and-coming performers and songwriters, as well as helping the community. He started his own sound company, called "Rage Sound," and two years later, founded "Jemstar Productions" to promote and market his clients. Today, Jemstar Productions has expanded into a full fledged multimedia production facility. (jemstar.com) At the age of 19, Jeremy used his creative and musical talents to create a charity project called "The Music of Christmas." Its objective was to help those less fortunate during the holiday season. Under Jeremy's direction, he and his staff raised money through live musical performances, and a CD featuring local talent. The project was a huge success, and Jeremy donated over $20,000.00 to six different children's charities in his community. Thousands of children received Christmas gifts, and a sense of hope. Because of his devotion to the community, Jeremy was awarded Fall River's Hometown Hero Award in 2000. Jeremy is currently working on two new charitable projects: "We Are Free," a program dedicated to the victims, survivors and heroes of 9/11, and "Sponsor A Child," a program which donates profits to foster art music programs for children in Southeastern Massachusetts. Jeremy has also released his second album of original songs, called "The Experiment."
