This left-handed Taurus was born and raised in Rocky Mount, Virginia. Though, he has spent many successful years in Austin, he is not from Texas. No matter the region in which he lives or plays; one thing is certain, no one should try to box in Matt Powell. He's spent his whole life avoiding labels and this record is no different. "I live to make music and I love almost all styles. Ive let every kind I listen to influence my sound at some point or another over the 18 years Ive been playing." says Matt. His latest offering: "New Kind Of Something" is his fifth independent studio project. If youve heard his previous work, this record draws a little bit from all the styles he's touched on in the past like rock, blues, and bluegrass.If you havent, then this cd is a perfect place for you to discover Matt Powell. Matt played nearly every instrument on this record including some drums and piano as well as the usual: guitars bass, mandolin, banjo, and organ. Along with Britton Beisenherz, Matt co-produced "NKS" at Britton's studio: Ramble Creek in Austin, Texas. "I feel this record aptly represents me as an artist and definitely reflects my growth on the crazy journey that is this life. I hope you will buy a copy for yourself, and if you enjoy it tell everybody you know. I hope you'll go back and pick up my other cds as well."
