Details: Most of Craig's time in the music business has been spent in recording studios in Denver, L.A. and Nashville as a studio singer, guitarist, pianist, writer, producer, arranger and engineer. He has worked and performed on other artists' recordings but mostly made his living doing radio television commercials, some of which were released as records (one of them resulted in a Billboard Hot Country 100 single in the late 70's "I Believe He's Gonna Drive That Rig To Glory" done for White Freightliners). You may have heard his voice or work in connection with AT&T, Coors, Denver Nuggets, Frontier Airlines and hundreds of others. Craig has been involved in literally thousands of original and syndicated pieces of music. His writing, producing and arranging spreads as far as Australian, Belgium and Russia. Over the years, Craig performed live with L.A. based artists Dan McCorison and Richard Marx and with Denver based band LixDeLux and acoustic duos Cable Donaldson (with John Cable, formerly with the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band). Craig makes his home in the foothills just west of Denver.
