Ilios Steryannis on drums, Cindy Fairbank on piano, and Clinton Ryder on bass make up this quartet of crazy players who turn every live performance into a party. This talented singer/songwriter's work ethic and passion for music is evident in the fact that she has spent the past two years running, designing, and site-managing IndieVoice.com, Toronto's Online Independent Music Resource, along with a small group of independent music enthusiasts. This resource helps independent musicians gain end-to-end information about how to eke it out as an indie artist and provides valuable information and resources for music fans. The site also acts as an open forum for anyone who wants to have an independent voice. IndieVoice will soon be making the leap from a local Toronto stage to a global one, which will be of great benefit to musicians world wide. The time has come for world domination. Following in the footsteps of other like-minded and equally talented Toronto artists such as Ember Swift and Erin Smith, Janine Stoll will soon be an in-demand commodity of the capitalist money-swillers. Be one of the ones to say, "I knew her when...." Here's what people are saying: "Stoll uses her roots in r&b, gospel, punk, funk, folk and pop to add depth to her gutsy vocal delivery and catchy melodic writing. Edgy and honest, straightforward and lyrically compelling, the tunes on this new disc envelope her sense of hope and humour through the dark and moody material." - C'est What E-News, Toronto ON. "One thing I know about Janine Stoll is that she has an ability to write the perfect song. Although, she never just writes one perfect song or even a few perfect songs here and there. Consistently, Janine writes one perfect song after the other, each one standing on its own as a masterpiece, brilliant and distinct. Pure, strong voice, haunting melodies, astonishingly mature lyrics and story telling. If you're looking for good indie music, then this is the complete package. You can't go wrong with Janine Stoll." - Melissa McClelland, IndieVoice.com, Toronto ON. "Stoll is an extremely talented singer-songwriter who has performed with many acclaimed artists. She is capable of singing in various styles (folk, funk, rock, punk, jazz, country) with unflinching authenticity. With a voice that is at times reminiscent of Sarah Harmer, other times Alanis Morissette, Stoll is an amazing songwriter who has a penchant for melodically delicious songs, both up and down-tempo. As far as the Toronto music scene goes, most people are just learning about Janine Stoll and her talent, but she won't remain a secret for long." - Lisa Johnson, Imprint Magazine, Waterloo ON.
