Details: A New January (ANJ) pulls its influences from a wide variety of genres including electronica, alternative rock, and industrial. Most notable comparisons have included bands such as Depeche Mode, Nine Inch Nails and Curve. 2007 saw the unveiling of ANJ's latest studio effort, Self-Medicare. This release, the first to be entirely produced from concept to final mixes at Negative Nine, represents a more raw and even darker sound than their previous album, Cold and Naked an evolution of the band's sonic signature. Heavy electronic elements intermingle with distorted guitars and mangled audio, all the while retaining a certain pop sensibility.
