Arkansas Folk music with a touch of country, gospel, blues and home. 11 MP3 Songs FOLK: Modern Folk, COUNTRY: Country Folk Details: Music Biography of Captain T (Tom Hunnicutt) Captain T is the alter ego of one Tom Hunnicutt, who currently resides in Williford, Arkansas. Tom was raised in the Opposition community, a few miles south of Ravenden and his current home. He attended school in one of the old One Room School House where the teacher taught all the grades up through the eight. His mother, Odell Linda Perry Hunnicutt raised nine of her eleven children right there in Opposition. Tom learned to play the guitar as a young boy and started singing early in his life and he tells us hell be singing when he dies most likely. He first started singing all the old Gene Autry tunes, but as time passed he found himself copy-cating all the country and folk singers of his day. In 1956 he joined the United States Marine Corps and served twice in South Vietnam. Even during his combat days all the country boys took their music boxes with them and jammed in places most of us would never consider. Just imagine sitting on a bunker playing away with someone yelling, Hey, you nuts, that is INCOMING!!! Well, they just moved inside, but kept playing, as if it was more important than heading for cover. The term Captain T goes a bit further than his Marine Corps days as he was also commissioned into the California National Guard Reserves, as a Captain during the mid-late 1980s. He soon found himself becoming the Commanding Officer of the 502nd Infantry Battalion, 5th Infantry Brigade, which was commanded by Colonel David Patton (the nephew of the late General Patton). However, during that period his health became an issue and in the late 1980s he had to resign his commission. After a period of recovery the doctors recommended he return home to Arkansas and truly retire. Returning home to Arkansas the state he loved and missed helped him recover, but not fully and he became disabled do to a number of war-related problems and injuries. Therefore, you'll notice he now sits in a chair while playing his guitar, as he could lose his balance without notice, and he has had one too many bad falls which adds to his list of injuries. Tom's (Captain T) music is unpretentious and home grown with a few laughs and tears, but it will take you back in time to the good old days. Yet, even the young can relate to his songs, as they reflect a bit of today for Arkansas is the Natural State, and no body can take that away from you and no body can change it either. A proud heritage is worthy of having songs wrote about it! The Natural State Song is one of them. To date Tom has produced two musical CDs titled the Arkansas Years Part One and Part Two, with a third CD about to be released. It won't stop there for he is plans to do at least two more. His main goal is to promote Arkansas through folk music and it appears that is exactly what will happen based on the results to date.
