This is the little black cocktail dress of trip pop. 'Vulnerability' is brimming with quality. So that you can make up your own mind we have provided sound clips for every song. Lin was a finalist in this year's 'UK Songwriting Contest' with the track 'Dancing Through The Night'. Its inspiration - the summer Fiesta in Malaga, Spain. For seven continuous days and nights the streets are filled with dancing, laughter and music. If you love life you'll love this! 'Baby Come Home'. Originally this song was written for all the women whose guys go off to fight in the many conflicts in this sometimes crazy world-but it is a song for anyone whose loved one is far from home. Slow down... uncork the wine... dim the lights.... and let the warmth of Lin's music caress you. "Wow, what a cool recording. This is somewhere between jazz and AAA with a little electronic spice thrown in. Cremore's voice is clear, smooth and sultry and is a perfect match for this genre. The music is professional sounding as is the production and the songs are well written and complex. A class act all around. Stand out songs: "Dancing through the Night", "You Make Me Weak" and "Sitting on a Star" (which makes me think of Mary Tyler Moore for some reason). These are all really good songs however. Check out "Vulnerability" for yourself." Review by Amy Producer of Collected Sounds
