Goodness To Go is a handbook for humanitarians dedicated to the spirit of service that lives within us all. Proceeds will benefit the missions of the Goodness To Go social enterprise, including contributions to girl empowerment programs developed by the Child In Need Institute (CINI). For decades, CINI's programs have uplifted the lives of millions of impoverished people in east India, the birthplace of my daughter, Grace Shanti. A special focus of the Goodness To Go enterprise is joining the twenty-first century's global abolitionist movement and emancipation networks to end involuntary servitude, especially that of children. Human trafficking of all kinds must end. It's been 150 years since the U.S. Civil War, and as slavery was ending in the United States, the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution was drafted. It states that "involuntary servitude shall not exist going forward." May that be so in our lifetime.
