For several years hes controlled his music through the underground, eventually breaking out in 2002 as a recording artist and producer. Street Military, Foefive's first solo album, generated through the South without registering on any mainstream. With production by his own in house producers "C-sick Beats," Street Military is a partner affair with most of the tracks featuring his colleague Lil Mel. Born and raised out of North Omaha, NE, Chris Robinson has always had a vision of being successful in the music business. "Being where I'm from I had very little to motivate me to be successful, but I still knew I had to do something to make things happen. In most neighborhoods I found myself faced with gangs, violence, drugs, hustle, and the pimp game." He moved to Orlando, FL with his wife to pursue his goal of becoming a recording engineer. He obtained his degree in Recording Arts from Full Sail University. From that point his true entrepreneurial character and strength of mind evolved during his first internship at Redman Studios. He soon met a man named Tom Faulkner who became his first business mentor. "Tom is the one who took me under his wing and helped me to focus on what my true niche and vision truly is. Finding your niche is what truly makes you stick out far from the rest." With various business ventures and a steady line of entertainment projects Foefive still sets out to prove that there is no stopping when it comes to his resilience, and beyond doubt theres no ending to his extraordinary vision.
