They met in high school jazz band in the late 80's and grew up on 'butt' rock. Right away it was obvious that these two would be band geeks forever. In 1988, after starting a prog. rock band called Albino Rhino, they began paying to play at venues like the Cattle Club. From there, both moved on to college and slowly earned degrees in music while playing in separate bands. In 1999 they reunited as a live drum n bass group called Fulcrum Break, eventually evolving into what is now Don't Die. The two began to capture live recordings, original audio samples, and natural sounds. Stretching, tweaking, looping and remixing them into eclectic and mysterious soundscapes. With three CD releases in the past three years, these Northern California clowns have produced and recorded custom made electronic gypsy duets. Don't Die is always interested in performing at art shows and adding unique sounds to film and video. The album 'Like Dogs' is the second of three Don't Die albums. - dontdiemusic.com
