Following in his mothers footsteps Anthony would bang on the piano as often as he could. He quickly developed a love for music. When he wasn't in front of a piano he played sports with is brother and cousins at the playgrounds and on the sidewalks. Anthony became well-rounded in football, basketball, and baseball. He played football in high school and college. Anthony was a major stand-out at both levels. During college he majored in voice and and was the lead singer for all of his musical groups. After college he pursed a career in the NFL. When he wasn't on the practice he was in the piano room working on his music. Following his dreams to play in the NFL, Anthony spent five years in the Arena Football League. He has played for teams in New Jersey, Buffalo, Cincinnati, and Louisville. When I heard this very attractive and personable soul sing, I said to myself, "what is this guy doing playing sports?". I had to make sure he wasn't already a star, because he definately sounded like one. Anthony spent three years writing the material for "Is This Love". He told himself that he would make it to the NFL and release a CD with the money he made from his contract. In the mean time, Anthony recorded demos and handed them out to people. Fans that responded loved his voice and his contemporary style. Falling short of the NFL, Anthony took all the money he had and invested in a studio. This is when he decided to give music the same attention he gave football. In the summer of 2003 he recorded his debut album "Is This Love". Currently Anthony owns a business by the name of Up All Night Studios. The studio is located in Louisville, Kentucky. He is scouting talent and looking for artists that want to pursue a career in music. Anthony's goals are to become a well known song writer and producer. He wants to create a stopping ground for major artists to record when they are not in L.A., Atlanta or N.Y.
