World music with aboriginal sounds; rattles, Native drum, Mohawk flute a blend of contemporary instruments; meant to stir the heart to dance. 12 MP3 Songs WORLD: Native American, SPIRITUAL: Alternative CCM Details: Broken Walls was conceived in 1995 by Jonathan Maracle (a Mohawk from Tyendinaga Territory in Ontario, Canada) while attending a conference called the Sacred Assembly in Ottawa/Hull. As different First Nations speakers spoke of the walls that have been built between the visitors to this land and the First Nations people, he began to see the need for these walls to be broken and wrote the song Broken Walls on the spot and performed it on the drum at this Gathering. Broken Walls now consists of Bill Pagaran (Tlingit) from Palmer, Alaska on the drums, Kris Delorenzi (Italian) from Thunder Bay, Ontario on bass and backup vocals, and Jonathan Maracle (Mohawk), lead vocalist and guitarist. Broken Walls base many of their songs on the ancient sounds of the First Nations People of North America and often perform around their large Pow Wow drum, singing songs of and to the Creator. The band has a team of First Nations Dancers that often accompany them in full regalia when they perform. Broken Walls has toured worldwide over the past 10 years in such places as Peru, Mexico, China, Switzerland, France, Germany, Costa Rica, Hawaii, Australia, Israel, and extensively across North America. They have taken the healing quality of their music into many places where restoration and reconciliation were needed, with great results. Broken Walls was featured at Intervarsity Christian Fellowships Urbana (Americas largest missions conference). They have also been booked with Noel Richards at the Olympic Stadium in Berlin, Germany in July 2006 for the Call to the Nations worship festival.
