Details: Audrey Spillman is a singer/songwriter who spent her childhood on the sunny beaches of St. Simon's Island off the Georgia coast. After moving to Tennessee and attending Belmont University, she started playing shows in the Nashville area, winning over anyone who wandered into the tiny clubs and dive bars she was performing in. Her songs are mysteriously unique, yet warmly familiar, and with a voice that can instantly engage even the most tepid listener, she is starting to seduce audiences around the Southeast. Audrey's lyrics have a candid honesty that seems to wedge its way into any fan's heart, and as her fanbase grows, her shows are becoming memorable musical experiences for all who attend. Audrey's duet EP "Fade" was produced by Neilson Hubbard who has also produced other rising artists such as alt. singer/songwriter Matthew Perryman Jones. The EP is enchanting with a slightly dirty/vintage edge and introduces a throw back feel to the old says of soul with a modern twist. Tags: pop
