Details: The Random Walk is Wes Howard and Matt McGarraghy. They both grew up in Vienna VA. Wes and his brother Wayne, who plays the drums, had a band in the early 90s called The Dinnermints. Around this time, Matt was playing guitar for a band called Storm Season. Matt often went to see the Dinnermints perform around Northern Virginia and hung out with them at their house where he would often bring his guitar and join them on long jams of sonic exploration. In the late 90s Storm Season broke up. Some members of Storm Season, and the Dinnermints, including Matt and Wes, fused together to form a band called Humwawa. Humwawa recorded an album of heavy progressive rock in 2000/2001. At this time, a considerable portion of Humwawa's practices and live performances consisted of improvisation that often was very ambient in nature. This laid the groundwork for the atmospheric and experimental sound that came into being after the break up of Humwawa and the formation of The Random Walk around 2003/04. The cd cover is a painting by Laura Howard.
