From there, he never looked back. Growing up in Western Pennsylvania, Eric's experiences would inevitably find themselves embedded in song. Over the years, he became the frontman and writer for several bands, where he began playing guitar. This would add a dynamic and certain versatility to his songwriting approach. His songs would find their way to over 30 major market radio stations and his latest band to be touted as one of VH1's and Musician Magazine's Top 10 Unsigned bands in America. His songs have been selected by ESPN to be the backdrop for nationally televised major events such as the X-Games. In 2001, Eric began working as a solo artist, in which he has carefully crafted an entirely new arsenal of inspiring and moving songs out of his home studio in Buford, Georgia. He is currently releasing his debut solo album entitled "Inside Out". The inspiration for the record is mirrored in every track by his true-life struggle and journey.
