Details: We cant afford to be wealthy From now we must stick to what is kind Theres really nothing that the rich man has That the poor man cant hold in his mind Is it cliché to say that Jon McLurg is the most talented songwriter youve never heard of? Perhaps. Does that make it any less true? Certainly not. With a contemplative wisdom that belies his 25 years, he spins songs of truth, reflection, melancholy, contentment, and spirituality. Passion is the power that makes the world go round Power is the passion that slowly drives it down Destinys a diamond on the wrong side of town It takes a hungry eye to even see it Jons sophomore CD, The Auctioneer, was recorded not far from his hometown of Elginburg, Ontario (20 km north of Kingston) at Leopard Frog Studios by Chris Coleman (leopardfrogstudio.com) and features the musical talents of Coleman himself, Chris Murphy, Kelli Trottier, and Terry Tufts, among others. The CD runs the gamut of tones and emotions, from the lively anthem Old Montreal to the delicate Oldest Promise and culminates in the gentle yet epic last track, Big Band Theory, an alternate allegory for the Creation story: Our world began when a man took the hand Of a girl to a dance to hear a big band The old Palais floor shook the dust from the door Like never before This is an example of a song that is a bursting cornucopia of imagery: So strike up the band start something new From the trumpeters lips a giant star flew And it came undone and there was the sun For me and for you Influenced by the music of John Prine, Hank Williams, Leonard Cohen and Bob Dylan, Jon has entered into the realm of the songwriter with class, abundant talent, and wit, and his soft but smooth voice and elegant finger-style guitar playing has proven to be the perfect vehicle for his songs.
