Multi-instrumentalist, composer and world class violinist, born into a celebrated family of Gypsy musicians and son of the legendary guitarist and singer Vivi Limberger. He grew up listening to the Gypsy-swing style of Django Reinhardt but, inspired by recordings of Toki Horvath, from an early age was drawn to Gypsy music of Budapest called Hungarian Magyar Nta. At 21 he discarded the guitar and clarinet, up until then his two main instruments, and took up the violin. About the music I intend to play, to start of with, this music deserves to be re-appreciated in its essential form and for that reason I dont intend to create a new style immediately. It should again be played by musicians who really want to play it. Of course, we will not try to sound like a Gypsy band out of 1920, but also well not play current versions either. I would like to bring all these elements together that made me want to study this music, that still inspires me, even when it seems to be dead already. TCHA LIMBERGER
