ROCK: Funk Rock, POP: with Live-band Production Details: blue number nine's music is simultaneously fresh and retro; it's a brilliant blend that's fun and funky. Great horns, killer grooves, and lots of style. M. Hill, Tonight on the Radio. Like their last CD, the bands fourth release was created in the groups newly refurbished Concussion Studios. After revamping the studio, bandleader Stefanie Seskin, first produced another band (BELT) on her check other records label, with bn9s Marco Accattatis and Jack Gourdine as studio musicians. Upon its completion, Seskin began producing bn9s project, with BELT's vocalists singing some backups. Always resourceful, Seskin also created the artwork, with input from close friends. With dynamic horn arrangements, the powerful first track Dont Let Them, written by Seskin and Accattatis, inspires the listener to speak his or her own mind. Love the Beat is a funky uptempo dance tune that builds in intensity and leaves the listener unable to sit still. When I Wake Up is a sweet soulful number with interesting horn arrangements by Accattatis. The last song on the CD, Im in Debt, inspired primarily by Seskins student loan debt (she has an MA in Media Studies from New School University), is over 8 minutes long. Seskin originally wanted to fade the song out, but the musicians, especially the horn players, put so much energy and excitement into the extended jam (done in one take) that she decided to leave it up to the listener whether to let it roll or to hit stop".
