NIP was intrigued with music at an early age, because music served as an escape from a hard life in the cruel streets. By the tender age of ten, this artist was investing time and street earned money to pursue a rap career. In 2002, after establishing his company Eleanor Records, people were lining up to work with him. This motivated NIP to quickly maneuver in the music industry by making accomplices with such record companies as Heavy Set, Jam Tight, So Jazzy Ent. and Mafia Life. In 2004, he dropped his highly anticipated album Mix Tape Vol. 1. The album sold well and was so hot, NIP decided to revamp the album as Mix tape Vol. 1.5, a compilation showcasing additional Eleanor Records artist, and well known artist such as Lil Boosie, UPT Q (Beast mode) and a bonus track Fight Something. NIP collaborated in late 2005 with J-boy (The Renaissance) to make The Renaissance: Mix Tape which showcased numerous Baton Rouge artists including: Taliban, Jigga House, Quick, Max Minelli, Thug Brothers, VilleBoys and many other various artists. In 2006 NIP headlined for the Extreme Battle of the Bands official after party at The Renaissance Center with 2gutta, Slaughter House and Da

VilleBoys. NIP is currently on the road promoting for his upcoming album Hey Hater. The album singles are the hits: Fight Something, Dat I and soon to be classic Hater Blockers.
