The music from the movie has evolved into a powerful and romantic collection of melodies. The film is tied together by the "Not a Hero" theme that occurs throughout the film and culminates at the end with Lauren Woodrum singing the vocal "Not a Hero." Composer Jamie K. Auberg answered an ad in the newspaper to become the composer for the Virginia Film Co. The ad was actually for cover bands to record popular songs for the film, but Mr. Auberg sent his own music in. Originally, he was asked to write music to fill in the background of a few scenes while popular music would fill the rest. However, as the movie evolved, the pop songs were removed and Mr. Auberg's music took over, connecting the movie together with a unified musical score.
