How many times have you bought something, or read something, or watched something on TV because a friend or family member recommended it to you? Plenty of times I bet. And why do we do that? Because we trust their opinions. We say to ourselves well, if Bob went to this site and told me Id be a fool if I didnt go, I should probably check it out. You tell two friends, and they tell two friends, and so on and so on, until it spreads like wildfire. Now, imagine that instead of a close circle of friends telling each other about great products and services, you instead have communities of sites where thousands of people share what they find on the internet with other members. These members have grown to trust the recommendations made by other members, and so they tend to visit the sites that are posted in these communities.
