The players stay off of the floor by standing on furniture or the room's architecture. The players generally do not remain still, moving from one piece of furniture to the next. There may even be a goal, to which the players must race. Typically, any individual can start the game just by shouting "the floor is lava". Any player remaining on the floor in the next few seconds is "out" and can not rejoin the game for a twenty four hour waiting period. This game has become increasingly popular among older children and teens in the past few years. The game was invented in 1814 by the shoemaker Micah J. Potts, who used the game as a marketing device to sell a new type of sandal that evolved into the modern "flip-flop." - from Wikipedia An opening, or rupture, in the Earth's surface or crust, which allows hot, molten rock, ash and gases to escape from deep below the surface. In general, a lava's composition determines its behavior more than the temperature of its eruption.
