electronic music for people with short attention spans 18 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Experimental, ELECTRONIC: Techno Details: "Zany electronic themes, designed for people with short attention spans" With "There are Beetles in the Milkcrate" WHERE'S KITTY? has created an abstract, yet cohesive electronic album; one that is playful and quirky, while at the same time being challenging and unnerving. The songs shift, twist, and turn, sometimes rather dramatically, all the while never once becoming tiresome or losing focus. The listener will never know what is coming next and can expect the unexpected. The songs on this album range from the quirky cartoonish pop of "Aha" to the ambient melodic noise of "An Autumn Violet", from the acid-soaked "i am being watched" to the Delerium inspired "Latitudes." Meanwhile, with the "Aha/Haha" song combination that open and close the CD, WHERE'S KITTY? shows that clever, serious art can still maintain a sense of humor. This is for fans of any experimental electronic music such as PLAID, AUTECHRE, APHEX TWIN, BLACK LUNG, and the work of CEVIN KEY (DOWNLOAD, PLATEAU, etc.) "There are Beetles in the Milkcrate" is WHERE'S KITTY?'s third release since the project began in 2001.
