Grant Taylor wants to know. Universal questions with individual answers. Authenticity and playful abandon. Grant Taylor's music is a bundle of mixed metaphors. Grant's debut modern adult pop album, "The Journey," bridges decades of style from The Doors, the Pet Shop Boys, Harry Connick Jr. to Sting's latest incarnation. Grant takes you on a journey using kaleidoscopic images and lyrical poetry. Although many artists create catchy tunes with minimal impact on the listener, "The Journey" dares you to face your life and dig deeper. In "Voodoo Boy," Grant artfully wraps a carefree melody around a crucial question for men: "Is it the boys with all their toys or is it the girls with all their curls?" A multi-level, universal question with a unique answer for each man. Continuing in this vein, "In Your Eyes Forever" conveys women's desire to be loved. They wonder if their partner will always be there. Using intuitive insights, Grant gives us one man's take on the answer. Leaving the deep emotional truths of "In Your Eyes Forever," Grant Taylor rides to the crest of the current internet chat room wave. In his song "Cyberworld," Grant pulls back the curtain on millions of people who live a "hidden life" and portray themselves as they would like to be in "real life." Again, "Are you real or are you fake?" Grant Taylor provides rhythmic pathways to the answers through his words and music.
