The Fort Lauderdale Sun Sentinel called her a "Hidden Treasure" In each performance, Mary creates new meaning to familiar song lyrics of sophisticated rhythm and blues--- her first love---and has an equal affect on Old jazz standards. She attributes her multi-faceted talent to having grownup in a small northwestern Florida town; living in south Texas for several years and being blessed with a love for all kinds of music. Following her 1989 release of her first album; "BEST SELLER" on the Emerald Records label, Brooks began a collaboration with some local artists and formed the group known as "Mary Washington Special Blend. Her second album titled "Wild Women Don't get the Blues" kept her very busy for quite a while during the late ninety's where she remained on the Emerald records label until recently. As a Florida native who's childhood was filled with the sound of blues and a mixture of 50's 60's music,(which were constantly being played by older members of her family)She simply fell in love with the blues. Brooks group " Special Blend " consist of usually four to five top musicians, some young and some old, some male/some female, some of them whom she have worked with for twenty years or more.
