THIS AIN'T YOUR MAMA'S COUNTRY. Singer/songwriter Thomas Oliver delivers songs about livin', lovin', and losin' in an original Southern voice that doesn't try to imitate anyone. 12 MP3 Songs

COUNTRY: Modern Country, COUNTRY: Traditional Country Details: Atlanta singer-songwriter Thomas Oliver's brand of country is what country music would have been if it hadn't detoured through pop. As with his first solo CD, "Finally Over Losing My Mind," this CD is straight from the rich tradition of Southern music. The 12 songs here are from a writer who's lived a life he doesn't pretend has been perfect but one he knows has been blessed nevertheless. If it's honky-tonk you like, listen to Ms. Heartache. If you like to two-step, check out "The Life You Save Might Be Your Own." If you've lost in love, then by all means listen to Now, Like Then or Then I Remember. And if you want to hear what love is too often about these days, check out Traveling Kind-- we've all been there -- or Stolen Kisses, a haunting story of a man who can't help himself. If you want to hear what love can be about, listen to Where You Are. Audience of One is for those who have supported their loved one's crazy dreams. Can't Break a Broken Heart might break yours. It will be understood best and offer some comfort to victims of addiction -- not the addicts, but the victims, who hopefully survive when all else fails, as it sadly too often does. And for a little fun toe-tapping check out "Low-Down, Mean Dirty Blues." Who knows, your mama might like it, too.
