Breathe won the national songwriting competition in conjunction with Canadian Music Week in Toronto in the spring of 2001. The award led to heavy airplay for the song, which exploded to become the number one requested song in the Western Canadian market of Saskatoon. The success of Breathe inspired the band to embark on a full-length album project. They enlisted rising-star Producer, Mixer, and Engineer Jared Kuemper (Sheryl Crow, Tegan and Sara, Jason Falkner, Pusch, Tariq) to give direction to the project. Jared Kuemper encouraged the band to expand their horizons and collaborate with other writers in addition to continuing development of their own work. As a result, the album contains a rich mixture of songs, some of which are pure Butterfinger, and others which are collaborations with internationally renowned songwriters: Tariq, Wayde Hubbard, David Martin, and Ben Dunk. The band's horizons were truly expanded as the project took them to Calgary, Toronto and Los Angeles. The travel the band experienced had a definite impact and was instrumental in the molding of the album's fresh sound. The result is a collection of songs with great guitar hooks and vocal melodies that leave the listener craving more. Jared Kuemper's strong direction and perfectionist style along with Butterfinger's willingness to do anything to get the best out of their studio experience proved to be a great combination. The resulting record has exceeded all expectations and generated considerable buzz in anticipation of its release. The band's great live show has only added fuel to the fire.
