Details: Christina Kowalchuk is a soulful, powerhouse singer, with a wide range of styles and sounds. Her first solo CD, "How Much Noise," is an indie-rock-folk-pop hybrid that inspired reviewer comments such as, "Take a powerhouse voice with a sense of humor, add in some of the best of The San Francisco Bay area musicians, great songwriting and monkey noises, and you're in for the treat that is Christina Kowalchuk's debut album." Fresh on the heels of this release, Christina has completed several songs from a previous project that's equally close to her heart. Started with Norm Long of Algorhythmic Productions, and finished with How Much Noise producer Margrit Eichler, these songs are penetrating and unforgettable. With a distinctly more R&B style than How Much Noise, these tracks, Let Go and No Choice are freedom songs they tell of the struggle for autonomy and the trials and triumphs of loving yourself best. Kowalchuk shines in these tracks letting loose and soaring with her lead vocals, and singing all her own backing tracks to create a rich auditory backdrop. These songs will quickly get stuck in your head, and you will be thrilled to have them there.
