Contemporary Christian 10 MP3 Songs GOSPEL: Contemporary Gospel, POP: Power Pop Details: Released in 2002 Devin's sophomore solo project, Fly seems to give us some insight into the heart mind of a maturing artist. It cant be coincidence that the chorus of the title track (which was co-written by Webb) reads, FlySpread my wings flySoaring with my heartI know I wont be denied With a couple of other songs co-written by Webb being that he co-produced the project (with Steve Griffith), one might think that this was his first attempt at making a statement. Although he knows what he is best at doing, there are definite glimpses of creative freedom being experienced. Like his previous recording, the songs are all over the map stylistically. Which is refreshing, especially in an age where most CDs have the same sound on every song. The power pop songs (Your Love for Me All I Need) have tremendous energy you cant help but envision yourself cruising with the top down the music blaring. The power ballad When We Cross the River speaks of hope beyond this life is sung with irrefutable conviction. There is a token moody song (God of All Creation) one full-on rock tune (Break it Down) which is a little bit of a stretch for the typically silky, pure-toned vocalist. The 4-on-the-floor tempo in the verses of Holy Father is so contagious that you can help but bounce along to the beat. The album concludes with what you know in your heart he was born to sing: A tender, contemplative ballad (From This Moment On/On Mountains High). The simplicity of the piano/vocal production the lush strings that enter halfway through the song only enhance compliment his voice. Once again, Webb delivers an album worth listening to (not without help from his compadre, Michael Neale). From beginning to end, the songs are strong you wont find yourself skipping through the tracks to find the good ones.
